

STAY AT HOME OR MOVE TO A SENIOR LIVING COMMUNITY?

Is it better to stay or move? If you or a loved one is struggling with this question, consider the passion, place, and people that make up senior living communities.

The Passion

One strong benefit to living at a community is the care that associates provide their residents.

- 24-hour nursing associates will meet your needs as they arise
- Activity directors plan monthly outings, socials, and events with your interests in mind

Each Pegasus team member wants to know your story, your likes, your dislikes, and shape the experience of our community around you. Most of all, our associates want to make sure you feel right at home.

The Place

Think about the upkeep and maintenance your home may need, especially for older models. Is it worth your time to be continuously keeping up with it?

- All services, such as housekeeping, maintenance, and dining, are provided
- No more worrying about yardwork, cooking your meals, or even making your bed

But if the chores are gone, will you live a life of no purpose? Quite the opposite. You will have the time to pursue something meaningful, like volunteer work or pursuing a hobby. When you think of the value of your time, your priorities on where you want to live may change.

The People

Think about the benefit of the word 'community.' You will be surrounded by people who understand your life because they are going through the same circumstances as you.

- There will be people who want to play a card game, try a class or dine with you
- Resident Ambassadors want to help new residents and make sure you are never alone

Open yourself up to friendships with people who will understand you and may have the same interests.

Don't delay on your health or happiness.
